Delegates Welcomed

College President

It is a pleasure to welcome you, the student delegates and advisors of the Fifth Model United Nations Conference, to the campus of San Francisco State college.

The importance of the annual Model U. N. Conference is clearly revealed by the participation of schools, the number of which has grown from year to year to make the 1955 session the largest student conference in the United States.

This year 1200 representatives of 80 colleges and universities in the eight Western states, Alaska and Canada, will take part in finding possible solutions to the world's most troublesome problems.

We are pleased and proud that San Francisco State college should serve as host on such a memorable occasion as the tenth anniversary of the United Nations at the very site where that great body was founded.

Sincerely,
J. PAUL LEONARD

International Court Is Added To Conference

For the first time in the five-year existence of the Model United Nations, an International Court of Justice has been added to the organization along with several other committees.

Members of the Court do not come from any of the regular delegations representing member nations of the U. N. They have been chosen separately from law schools and other participating colleges.

Chairman Robert Kaiser of San Francisco State is presiding. All court business is being conducted as a separate unit within the Model U. N. The sessions are being held in the campus main auditorium.

A motor pool is in operation to facilitate transportation between the Court and the Opera House, where sessions of the General Assembly are being held. The delegations have been invited to feel free to use the facilities of the court at all times during the conference.

Problems may be prepared from past international decisions, from subject matter developing in the conference sessions, or "rock" problems.

ASSFSC President

The students of San Francisco State college have been looking forward to your arrival for a number of months. They have worked hard to prepare a Model United Nations conference which we hope you will enjoy.

The Associated Students of San Francisco State college, as your hosts, are at your disposal. I hope that you will consider every student of the college as your friend. Our only concern is the fulfillment of your desires of the conference.

The San Francisco War Memorial Opera House, a structure as stately as the U. N., has become a symbol of the world organization in which we all place our faith for peace. This building has been engaged for the Fifth Annual Model United Nations so that you can perhaps capture some of the mood which was present in the signing of the United Nations Charter ten years ago.

Here is your opportunity to gain in memories, friendships, and a better understanding of the ideals of the United Nations. I welcome you to San Francisco State college and wish you a pleasant stay with us.

Sincerely,
BOB HORN

Conference Director

On behalf of the Fifth Model United Nations Commission and the 500 staff workers, may we extend our welcome to San Francisco to each and every one of you.

We hope that the many hours of extended work that commission members have been putting in will now prove beneficial as you delegates begin using this "machinery" that we have established for your use.

This is your conference and we hope that you will make use of the facilities, the equipment, the rules of operation and of the program that have prepared.

We hope that you have had the opportunity to study and prepare to represent your country in all aspects of international affairs. We know that your long hours of study will pay off in committee sessions and in the General Assembly.

May I express personally that we shall do all we can to make your four days memorable ones in your educational careers and if we can do anything for you at any time, please call on us to serve you.

Very sincerely yours,
CHANDLER R. MELOY

Korean Dispute Aired In Security Council

The Korean armistice may cause a dispute in the Model U. N. Security Council. The conflict will arise between the Chinese Nationalist delegation (from Pomona college, Pomona, Calif.) and Soviet Russia (San Francisco State college) when they introduce conflicting resolutions dealing with the Korean settlement.

The Chinese proposal sharply criticizes the existing situation and calls for the replacement of the present U. N. Peace Commission with a special investigating committee of the Security Council. The plan is designed to insure observance of the armistice terms and the present military position, obtain the release of U. N. prisoners still held by the Communists, and attempt to find a common ground for the unification of Korea.

It calls further, in the event of interference with the new U. N. investigators, for the branding of the intervening nation as an "aggressor," immediate abrogation of the 1953 cease-fire, resumption of U. N.

military action in Korea, and the political unification of all Korea under a popular elected government.

The Soviet proposal, on the other hand, states simply that the Korean armistice has produced no satisfactory solution to the "threat to the peace of the world." The Soviets suggest, as their answer, the recognition of both the North and South Korean de facto governments as the legal governments in their respective areas. They also call for the immediate recognition of all other de facto governments as the legal representatives of their people in the United Nations.

DELEGATIONS BRING OWN PRESS AGENTS

For the first time in the history of the Model United Nations, delegations will bring their own press agents. The delegation of each member nation has brought two publicity men to the conference, it is reported.

Model U. N. Opens Today

Court, Council Meetings Take Place On Campus

All week, the 1200 delegates, representing nearly 80 colleges and universities in eight Western States, Alaska and Canada, have been pouring into San Francisco for the three-day Model United Nations Conference, hosted this year by San Francisco State college. The opening session of the General Assembly will begin at 9:30 o'clock tomorrow morning at the Opera House, birthplace of the United Nations ten years ago.

Today's activity is confined to the International Court of Justice and the committees and councils meeting on campus.

The Model U. N., the largest student conference in the country, is a mock conference of important councils, committees, and agencies that form the United Nations itself.

Several of the committees and the International Court of Justice have been added to the U. N. for the first time this year. Addition of the International Court has greatly enlarged participation in this year's conference.

Tomorrow's agenda will be made up from the resolutions of the various councils and committees meeting on campus today.

These organizations include: the Security Council, the Economic and Social Council, the Trusteeship Council, the Charter Revision Council, the Social Humanitarian and Cultural Council, the Trusteeship Committee, the International Monetary Fund, the International Labor Organization, UNESCO, and the Ad Hoc Membership Committee.

Members of the Court do not belong to any of the regular delegations, but come from law schools and other participating colleges.

Student delegations, representing all member nations of the U. N. and more than 20 non-member nations, will profit much by learning about international affairs and the difficulties encountered when meeting with peoples of other countries to resolve mutual problems.

The International Court of Justice, meeting in the college main auditorium, is hearing cases presently before the real International Court. The Security Council will discuss and vote on such matters as disarmament, breaches of peace, and collective security. The agendas have been planned to center discussion on current world problems, that resolutions may be passed to rectify

Prominent Law Members Guide Student Court

Distinguished local and national legal authorities will guide the work and decisions of the Model U. N.'s International Court of Justice today, tomorrow, and Saturday. Student Justices of the International Court of Justice are not members of regular student delegations but are students from law schools of other participating universities.

A Judicial Advisory Board will guide the students in their activities. The Judicial Advisory Board to the International Court of Justice is composed of the following legal authorities: Judge Lenore D. Underwood, Presiding Judge of Municipal Court; Allen Ford, Clerk of the California Supreme Court, and Bay Area Attorneys Miss Tommy Angell, Mr. Howard Taubenfeld and Mr. Allen Rockwell.

Other legal authorities taking an active interest in the Model U. N. comprise an Honorary Judicial Advisory Board composed of:

Dr. Carl B. Spaeth, Dean of School of Law, Stanford University; Douglas L. Edmonds, Associate Justice, Supreme Court of California, and Dr. William L. Prosser, Dean of School of Law, University of California.

While the work and decisions of the student court will be guided by the Judicial Advisory Board, the final judgments will be made by the Student Justices.

The Court will hear cases presently before the International Court of Justice in The Hague and will also hear and decide on hypothetical cases presented by student delegation to the Model U. N.

Sessions of the International Court of Justice will be held in the main theatre on the San Francisco State college campus. Open to the public, admission is 75 cents general and 25 cents for students.

Production Taped For 250 Stations

Combined efforts of the Radio-Television Guild and the Drama Department of San Francisco State college have resulted in the production of a 30-minute documentary recording of the workings of the United Nations.

Entitled "We Follow in Their Footsteps," taped copies of the production have been distributed to 250 radio stations in the Western states and Alaska for airing this week.

Written by Rene Cardenas, the script traces from the days of the League of Nations up to the present tenth anniversary of the signing of the United Nations Charter in San Francisco, and describes the work of students, mindful of their worldly responsibilities, energetically participating in the same problems that baffle the delegates who assemble at the U. N. Headquarters at Lake Success.

The motivating spirit propelling U. N. delegates to probe for eternal peace is the underlying current in the narration, capably interpreted by Bill Plumb.

Three-Day Conference Offers Great Benefits

By JOHN P. MAXWELL
Editorial Assistant

We of San Francisco State college are privileged and honored to welcome and play host to the fifth annual Model United Nations Conference.

Since its origin at Stanford University in 1951, the Model U. N. has done much to educate West Coast students in the problems and complexities of world organization. Each succeeding year the additional colleges and students attending have attested to the growing popularity and feasibility of this Junior United Nations.

COMMUNICATION NEEDED
In the present atomic age, when international distrust brought on by iron or bamboo curtains and refusal of diplomatic recognition can set off the horror of world destruction, we are in dire need of a common debating ground for communication.

Realizing that the concept of world thinking was a comparatively new phenomena in the United States that would need both academic and practical indoctrination, the originators of the Model U. N. made their meager start four years ago with some 200 delegates.

Today we expect some 1200 delegates to convene and discuss a variety of important international issues. What may be decided by this conference will not have world-wide repercussions but it will reflect the thinking of a great portion of American youth. The serious and diligent debate of the next three days will denote the nation's young striving to break with isolationism.

BACKGROUND FOR MEET

The preparation a delegate must undergo in subjects like international law, parliamentary procedure, public speaking, economics and the myriad debating tactics are an education in themselves.

The real benefit to the student will be derived during the conference itself by participating in the actual processes of the United Nations. In the years to come, no matter what his field of endeavor, the student will understand its advantages and limitations. He will not expect it to be a Board of Quick Cure All and be impatient for it to be a panacea for all the world's problems.

SOUNDING BOARD

Just so long as each subscribing nation in the United Nations is sovereign unto itself and the larger nations reserve the veto power, the U. N. will be powerless. Its worth as a sounding board and communication nerve center between nations cannot be underestimated. World organization, as stated before, is a young phenomena but if properly nurtured it could grow into an effective force in the being of the U. N.

The Model U. N. in the preceding years throughout the United States has attempted in its small but effective way to foster understanding of the "one world" concept as first outlined by the late Wendell Wilkie in his book of the same name. It has been sponsored in this attempt by the CCUN (Collegiate Council for the United Nations) which is a subsidiary of AAUN (American Association of the United Nations) under the chairmanship of Eleanor Roosevelt.

Major Press Releases Will Be Translated

Foreign countries receiving press releases from the Model United Nations Commission this year have been spared the trouble of translation. Larry Medina, foreign language editor of the Public Relations office has been responsible for having all the major releases translated into several foreign languages and mailed to overseas newspapers.

Along with finer flavor, Winston also brings you a finer filter. The exclusive Winston filter works so effectively, yet doesn't "thin" the taste or flatten the flavor.

A GUIDE FOR THE DATELESS

With the cost of dating rising higher and higher (seems the only pleasure that costs the same these days is Philip Morris), it is no wonder that so many of us men are turning to discus throwing. Naturally, we would prefer nuzzling warm coeds to flinging cold discs, but who's got that kind of money? Prices being what they are, the average man today has a simple choice: dating or eating.

Unless the average man happens to be Finster Sigafos.

Let me tell you how Finster Sigafos, a man no smarter, no richer, than you or I, solved his dating problem. Finster came to college with the normal ambition of any average man: he wanted to find the prettiest coed on campus and make her his. He looked long and carefully, and at last he found her—a tall job named Kretchma Inskip, with hair like beaten gold.

He asked her for a date. She accepted. He appeared at her sorority house that night, smiling, eager, and carrying a bouquet of modestly priced flowers.

"Now then," said Kretchma, tossing the sleazy flora to a pledge, "where are we going tonight?"

Finster was a man short on cash, but long on ideas. He had prepared several attractive plans for this evening. "How would you like to go out to the Ag campus and see the milking machine?" he asked.

"Ick," she replied.

"Well then, how about running over to the dental school to fool with the drills?"

"Bah," she replied.

"Well, what would you like to do?" he asked.

"Come," said she, "to a funny little place I know just outside of town."

And away they went.

The place was Millionaires Roost, a simple country inn made of solid ivory. It was filled with beautiful ladies in backless gowns, handsome men in dickeys. Waiters scurried about bearing costly eats on flaming swords. Original Rembrandts adorned the walls. Philip Morris trays adorned the cigarette girls. Chained to each table was a gypsy violinist.

Finster and Kretchma were seated. "I," said Kretchma to the waiter, "will start with shrimps remoulade. Then I will have lobster and capon in madeira sauce with asparagus spears. For dessert I will have loads of out-of-season fruit."

"And you, Sir?" said the waiter to Finster.

"Just bring me a pack of Philip Morris," replied Finster, "for if ever a man needed the soothing, steady, beneficent aromas of mild vintage tobaccos, it is me now."

So, smoking the best of all possible cigarettes, Finster watched Kretchma ingest her meal and calculated that every time her fetching young adam's apple rose and fell, he was out another 97¢. Then he took her home.

It was while saying goodnight that Finster got his brilliant idea. "Listen!" he cried excitedly. "I just had a wonderful notion. Next time we go out, let's go Dutch treat!"

By way of reply, Kretchma slashed him across the face with her house mother and stormed into the house.

"Well, the heck with her," said Finster to himself. "She is just a gold digger and I am well rid of her. I am sure there are many girls just as beautiful as Kretchma who will understand the justice of my position. For after all, girls get as much money from home as men, so what could be more fair than sharing expenses on a date?"

With good heart and high hopes, Finster began a search for a girl who would appreciate the equity of Dutch treat, and you will be pleased to hear that he soon found one.

Today Finster goes everywhere and shares expenses fifty-fifty with Mary Alice Hematoma, a lovely three legged girl with sideburns.

'Atomic Energy and International Law'

Dr. Wu Moderates Panel Of Faculty and Lawyers

"There should be no distance between the layman and the law," said Dr. Nelson Wu at the panel discussion on Atomic Energy and International Law held in the Main Auditorium on April 28.

Dr. Wu was the moderator for the panel composed of two faculty members, Doctors Urban Whitaker and Bernard Kronick of the Social Science department, and two lawyers, Mr. Richard Scott and Mr. William Coblentz.

According to the moderator, the law is supposed to indicate the feelings of the people. No law ever lasted without the consensus of opinion.

"I'll bet all my worldly goods that atomic annihilation will never come," said Dr. Whitaker. "The only reason that international law can be infested is that people can be afraid of something. If they are, they will be obedient to something."

He said that the United Nations has no creative purpose. It is a tool of the tension of those people who use it. International law is extremely weak. It doesn't have much control. Major political issues never enter into political law.

"International law has never helped to keep peace or make peace." He predicted that war will be something outmoded before we ever agree to work against war.

In contrast to Dr. Whitaker's point of view, Dr. Kronick said that international law will organize the realities in the lives of the people and nations. "International law will diminish the frequency for war. It will not, however, guarantee the absolute omission of war."

"History gives reason for hope but not optimism," he said. "World War II was not because the international organization broke down but because statesmen did not support the international organization." He said that in the future we will continue to see numerous small wars.

According to Mr. Coblentz, law is a human necessity. He said that international law worked up until now, and he cited laws like the postal union and laws that grant ambassadors immunity from arrest.

"Wars are caused," was the point of view of Mr. Scott. He said that we cannot erase war but we can hope to minimize it. In his discussion he mentioned the following as causes of war:

- 1—The use of war as a means to a political end;
- 2—It is a miscalculation or accident;
- 3—It is psychological aggressiveness; and
- 4—It is the absence of legal restraint.

"We must keep open channels of settlements and these settlements must be just and accepted."

He said that we should have legal regulation of the right to use force. It is not a question of outlawing law because law has already been outlawed.

Disarmament, he believed, has become impossible. In this field, he said, the United Nations has not been effective.

"The thing that keeps the United Nations functioning is political problems."

Tryouts for Yell Leaders Set for Next Wednesday

Try outs for assistant yell leaders and song leaders will be held Wednesday, May 11, at 4 p. m. in the men's gym.

Dick Laine, chairman of the Elections Committee, stated that "This year's Board of Directors has appointed a completely new committee for the selection of assistant yell leaders and song leaders."

"The faculty and student members of this year's selection committee," Laine continued, "were chosen from several representative segments of the college in an effort to select the people best qualified for the positions regardless of how well the individual is known or the number of friends he may have.

"It is for this reason," Laine concluded, "that I personally urge every San Francisco State student who would like to be assistant yell leader or song leader and feels himself capable of holding the position to try out this coming Wednesday."

U.S.S.R. Delegates to Model U.N.

Chairman Sami Judah (seated) and members of the Soviet Delegation

State Delegation Is Headed By Chairman Sami Judah

Just why a foreign student would choose to involve himself deeply in extra-curricular activity as extensive as the Model United Nations is an interesting question. Many foreign students are serving on the San Francisco State college Soviet Union delegation and probably scores of others are serving on the delegations representing colleges taking part in the conference.

Typical of these foreign students is Sami Judah, chairman of the Soviet Union delegation. His home is in Jordan.

Judah is a graduate student candidate for a Masters' degree in International Relations. As he hopes to enter the Jordan diplomatic service when he returns home, he is naturally interested in world affairs.

"There is much more to learning than is taught in classrooms," he says, and I believe that the lack of understanding that exists between countries can be improved if individuals understand each other." That is why he is studying abroad.

Although his native tongue is Arabic, Judah speaks excellent English which he learned in Jordan high schools. Although his major field of interest is not offered in Jordan colleges, he could have studied in Egypt.

"Our colleges at home are patterned after the English system," he states, "and there is little choice of fields of study for anyone."

When he decided to study in the United States, Judah knew little about American colleges. What he knew of San Francisco State, he had read in the catalog.

"But I like the American system of liberal education," he states. "I just fell in love with the college. That is why I stayed as a graduate student after receiving my degree."

Sami has involved himself in outside activities very extensively. Besides being this year's chairman of the school's Soviet delegation, he served on last year's conference as a member of our Philippine delegation. He has served as president of the International Relations Club, vice president of the Association of International Relations Clubs and chairman of the Student World Affairs Council conference last year, which involved 35 colleges and universities from Northern California.

When asked the time-worn question about what impressed him the most in the United States, he finds it difficult to answer.

"I could write a book on that," he says. "The business . . . the rush . . . the liberal

Hidalgo Serves as Chief Delegate to Trusteeship Council

Mario Hidalgo, a native of the Philippine Islands but a naturalized citizen of the United States, is a member of S. F. State's Soviet Union delegation to the Model United Nations, acting as chief delegate to the Trusteeship Council.

Hidalgo's story is an interesting one: he was born in Binalonan, Luzon Island, and spent his adolescence in the Philippines during the Japanese occupation.

"In order to avoid being conscripted into the Japanese 'labor battalions' being organized at that time for trench digging and other defense work, my brother and I ran away to the Southern Philippines to work on a large sugar plantation. When my brother returned to his position as an officer in the Philippine guerrilla forces, I took his place as foreman of a large group of men at only 15.

"This was my first experience in interpersonal relations; and there was much to be learned, especially in my dealings with the big plantation owners.

"My father was one of the leaders who collected food and other supplies and took it to the guerrilla forces in the mountains. The occupying soldiers arrested him and put him in a dungeon for three days without food or water. I guess this is one of the main reasons compelling me to join the guerrilla forces. After that time my whole family was blacklisted.

"Life was cheap in those years. I didn't expect to survive through the war. I always carried a revolver with me. I guess that's how war is, no matter which side you're on.

"After the liberation I joined the U. S. Navy. It was as an American sailor that I first came to the United States."

Hidalgo received his high school diploma in one semester at San Francisco City college, and remained there for three more semesters to receive his Associate of Arts degree.

He then came to State, and graduated last year with a major in Social Science. His graduate work is in International Relations.

It was his interest in international relations and politics that brought Hidalgo to apply first for the Model U. N. delegation last year. He represented for S. F. State his original country, the Republic of the Philippines, at the 1954 Model U. N. at UCLA.

It was a combination of student activities and in international relations that directed him toward the Model U. N. "Besides that, I guess it was the influence of my father, who is a local politician—a councilman—at home."

Hidalgo's comments on the Model U. N. delegation reflected much of the opinions of his "comrades" representing the USSR: "As a Soviet delegate, I will do my best to represent the USSR in the Model United Nations, and support their policies, because I feel that the Model United Nations must be as accurate as possible in order to be beneficial; but as an individual, of course, I believe in the democratic way of life."

Meloy Heads Model U. N. Commission for S. F. State

As conference director of the fifth Model U. N., Chandler R. Meloy has the ultimate responsibility of the success of this year's conference.

Of the U. N. he has this to say: "I am interested in the success of the United Nations. The United States expended over 30,000 lives in the defense of U. N. principles in Korea and I feel any contribution that we can make to help the U. N. achieve their goal will be a tribute to the memory of these men."

Meloy was born in Boston and first enrolled at S. F. State in 1949 as a limited student while in the Army. He attended a specialist school for infantry public relations work and performed special work in television and radio for the Department of Defense, during his time in the Army.

Meloy was on the debating teams at S. F. State, and won the first cup that S. F. State ever received for speech in a tournament.

He gained much experience for his present job by serving as chairman of the Philippine delegation in the fourth Model United Nations.

Joel Robert Cannon, Secretary General of the Model U. N., was elected parliamentarian of the Philippine delegation to the fourth Model U. N. which was held at UCLA.

Cannon stated that "The fifth Model U. N. will be a tremendous educational medium for informing the students and the public of the principles and workings of the United Nations. The Model U. N. applies the pragmatic approach to the or ease matters now causing world tension.

Many figures of the United Nations are taking an active interest in the problems before the Model U. N., so that the discussions and decisions made may be analyzed for possible application to real international affairs.

A great many of the student delegates are actually natives of the countries they are representing, and will soon return to their homelands, where they will be actually affected by the problems they discussed at the Model U. N. In all probability, questions will arise at the conference that are very real and of the utmost importance to these students, who may soon assume positions of leadership in their respective nations.

At the conclusion of each conference a host college is designated to sponsor the next conference.

The first Model U. N. Conference was hosted by Stanford in 1951. Some 240 delegates attended. Since then, University of Southern California, University of California, and University of California at Los Angeles have been hosts.

Interest and participation in the conference has increased sharply from year to year.

A year ago, San Francisco State college received the nod of approval to host the fifth conference at the now historic birthplace of the U. N. As is usual for the host college, S. F. State will also provide the delegation to represent the Soviet Union, and in keeping with established precedent, the host of the preceding year, in this case UCLA, will represent the United States.

In all, 500 students of State will have participated in organizing, developing and carrying out the conference.

U. N. and meets the classroom technique."

Donald Guiseke, Assistant Conference Director, entered S. F. State in the fall of 1948. He spent 1950-52 in the Marine Corps. He expects to graduate this June. Personnel administration in the Business Division is his major.

Entering S. F. State in the fall of 1949, Allan Eckstein, financial director, had his studies interrupted in June, 1950, when he joined the Marines. He served in the finance section in Guam and Japan.

Eckstein is an accounting major and began work in the Model U. N. in 1954 as assistant financial director.

"The financial success of the Model U. N.," said Eckstein, "depends upon the purchase and selling of tickets to the Model U. N. by the students of S. F. State. I urge all students to offer their services in this or any other phase of the Model U. N."

Thomas Schaffer, director of administrative co-ordination, is an International Relations major and is planning to enter the United States Foreign Service.

In April, 1952, he was a delegate to the third Model U. N. at University of California, representing Pakistan. Shaffer worked on the Security and Trusteeship Councils.

Jo Ann Hendricks, executive secretary, is also an International Relations major. She is a sophomore this year, a graduate of Washington high school in this city.

education . . . the parent-child association, which is too close for the child's own good . . . and a lot of other things impress me greatly."

The one thing that gave him trouble, however, on his arrival from Asia, was not our language, dress, customs, or mannerisms. It was food. He missed the highly seasoned dishes of the Middle East.

"I was sick for two months on American boiled food," he recalls.

CONSULS TO ATTEND OPENING SESSIONS

All consuls of foreign countries with offices in San Francisco were tendered invitations to attend today's opening session of the General Assembly of the Model U. N. as guests of the Model United Nations Commission.

The various consuls have, for months past, been important sources of information to delegations representing their respective countries.

International Court Is Added To Conference

lems of the future may be developed.

Should any nation be accused by another branch of international law, etc., a defense attorney will be appointed to assist that nation in making a reply. Judgments of the Court are final and cannot be appealed.

In order that members of the Court may research legal questions, the Hastings College of Law and the University of San Francisco have granted use of their library and facilities upon presentation of credentials.

25 Students in USSR Delegation At Model U. N.

A delegation of 25 S. F. State students will represent the U. S. S. R. at the Model U. N. Conference to be held here May 5, 6, and 7.

The delegates were chosen by a committee of instructors and students on the basis of general knowledge of contemporary politics, interest in world affairs, and academic standing.

During the past three months the delegates have been doing research in four main topics:

1—A complete study of the history of the U. S. S. R., as well as the structure, function and work of the Soviet Union;
2—A complete study of the structure, function and contribution of the U. N.;

3—A close look at the problems of the world that have been considered in the U. N. and especially the main problems which are considered a threat to world peace, how these problems were solved, and what the attitudes of each nation were;

4—A knowledge of each of the contemporary political problems facing the world today, whether it is brought to the U. N. or not, and especially the U. S. S. R. viewpoint.
